++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Rain spreading south with brighter, cooler conditions to follow.

Today:

South and east Scotland having mostly dry morning with early brightness. Rain becoming heavier over north and west Scotland, clearing southwards later. Brighter, showery, colder weather following. Strong westerly winds.

Tonight:

Rain clearing southern Scotland and cloud mostly clearing away with a cool, clear night ahead. Frost likely inland for much of the north with winds falling light.

Friday:

Noticeably chillier than recent days, but a dry and bright day with a lot of autumnal sunshine for most of the country. A few showers for the Northern Isles.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

A windy weekend but a dry, bright start Saturday, rain spreading east by afternoon. Cloudy with rain in the northwest Sunday, milder on Monday but cloudy with patchy rain.
